
TERI BROWN

Freelancer. Author. Editor. Speaker. Coach.

I am a freelance writer, multi-published author, editor, speaker and writing coach with over 20 years of professional experience. My novels – both traditionally and non-traditionally published – have been translated into a half a dozen languages around the world.

As a freelancer, my clips run the gamut from Backpacker Magazine to Women's Health and Fitness, to Writer's Digest to Dog Fancy. Locally, I've written for Community Newspapers of Oregon, Oregon Coast Magazine and Northwest Woman. I've also written for the Huffington Post and a host of Kimberly Clark newsletters.

Experience

2001 to 2009: Contributing Editor iParenting Media/Disney Internet Group

- Interviewed experts, organized research and wrote four to ten articles a month on topics concerning education, parenting, child development and health.

2001 to Present: Freelance Writer

- Extensively published in multiple magazines and newspapers including Writer's Digest, Backpacker Magazine, Dog Fancy, Women's Health and Fitness, Northwest Woman Magazine, Baby Years, Oregon Coast Magazine, Road King, multiple regional parenting magazines, Community Newspapers of Oregon and many more.

2007 to Present: Fiction Author and Speaker

- Published with Harper Collins, Simon & Schuster, Tule Publishing and Sourcebooks. Designed and implemented marketing strategies and events.

2014 to 2017: Community Educator for Portland Community College

- Taught novel writing, creativity, plotting and flash fiction for PCC's Community Education program.

2016 to Present: Freelance Editor and Writing Coach

- Edited and critiqued a variety of novels for content, story development, clarity and plot structure.
- Helped authors navigate the writing process from craft, to proposals to agent searching.
- Experienced creativity coach
- A working knowledge and understanding of the publishing industry